NYS&W #206 Arrives at Maywood Station!

The Maywood Station Historical Committee has acquired original New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad Alco S-2 #206, which was donated by the United Railroad Historical Society of New Jersey and formerly in their collection. On October 14, 2008, the historic locomotive was moved into Maywood Station by the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railway. An NYS&W track crew built a temporary panel track and realigned their mainline track to connect with Maywood Station's display track where Maywood Station Caboose #24542 is currently located. The locomotive will be on display and cosmetically restored by the Maywood Station Historical Committee. NYS&W #206 is the last survivor of the NYS&W's class of Alco S-2 locomotives built in late 1941 to early 1942 and is the only one of this type locomotive to be restored and on display to the general public in the State of New Jersey. Upon NYS&W #206's arrival at Maywood Station, MSHC members have immediately commenced restoration efforts with the goal of readying the locomotive for winter. The MSHC hope to have NYS&W #206 cosmetically restored sometime in 2009.

The MSHC wish to thank Nathan Fenno, Jim Howarth, Tom Charette, Bill Bloomfield, Frank Ignacio and Jim Thomas and members of the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railway train and track crews for their assistance in moving NYS&W #206 to Maywood Station. The MSHC also thank Steve West of American Railcar Industries, Tennille, GA and Mike Barbato of Hempel Coatings for their donations of the paint that will be used to restore NYS&W #206.

Vintage Lock Exhibit Was Featured at the November 9, 2008 Maywood Station Museum Open House

The Maywood Station Museum Open House on November 9, 2008 featured an exhibit of antique locks and locking devices courtesy of Maywood Station Historical Committee member Vincent Molodowec. In addition to the special exhibit - artifacts, photographs and items of historical significance were on display in the Maywood Station Museum and Caboose #24542 was open featuring its operating model train layout.

The General Lee, Classic Cars and Promotional Car Models Were Featured at the September 21, 2008 Maywood Station Museum Open House

A General Lee Dodge Charger from the 1970's television series The Dukes of Hazard plus additional classic cars were on display on the station grounds at the Maywood Station Museum Open House on September 21, 2008. Inside Maywood Station, a special exhibit courtesy of Douglas Dezso featuring Promotional Model Cars was shown. The plastic model cars were specifically made as promotional items for car dealerships in the 1950's to early 1990's period to give out to potential customers who were contemplating buying one of the actual cars. They came painted with the exact color that the real car was offered in and all the specifications were embossed on the bottom. Some had friction motors, others even came as banks. These were highly collectible by executives and car buffs of those eras. The heyday of these model cars was the 1960's. Today they are very rare and highly collectible, especially those in their original boxes.

MSHC Member Ed Quinn Remembers 50 Year Anniversary of Bayonne, NJ Tragedy

Fifty years ago, on September 15, 1958, Central Railroad of New Jersey Train #3314 from Bay Head, NJ to Jersey City, NJ with approximately one-hundred people on board running at 42mph ran through and open drawbridge in to Newark Bay. Two locomotives and the first two passenger cars plunged into 35-foot water while a third car remained hanging off the bridge partially submerged. Two other cars remained upright on the bridge span.

Forty-eight people died in the tragedy including retired New York Yankees all-star George "Snuffy" Stirnweiss, an Allied Chemical director, the Mayor of Shrewsbury, NJ, a U. S. Army secret courier and a 4-month old baby. Investigators determined that the engineer, Lloyd Willburn, went through three red signals, didn't see that the bridge was raised for a passing boat and didn't apply the train's brakes until it was about seven-feet from the open draw. Investigators concluded that all warning equipment was in working order. Mr. Willburn also perished in the crash. Fifty years later, the exact cause of the wreck is still unknown. It was, and still is, one of the worst train crashes in the history of the Northeast.

On September 15, 2008, the Bayonne Historical Society held a memorial service remembering those who lost their lives in the horrific wreck of Train #3314. One of the participants at the service was Maywood Station Historical Committee member Ed Quinn, who was a teenage apprentice seaman when the call came into the Coast Guard station on Staten Island 50 years ago. "I wasn't even supposed to be there, but they needed every available pair of hands", recalled Ed, who retired in 1998 as Commanding Officer of the Coast Guard Station in Sandy Hook, NJ. "I wanted to dive in to rescue people but it would have been stupid with the extreme current and all the other boats around although I had hoped I could possibly find one more survivor. I spent forty-one years in the Coast Guard. I've been to disasters with FEMA, including Hurricane Katrina and the horrible flooding in the Midwest this past summer but that day in Newark Bay was by far the worst."

At 9:45am September 15, 2008, a memorial service was held on the Bayonne waterfront near the site of the disaster. Boats on site sounded their horns at 10:01am, the exact time of the disaster and wreaths were laid in the water. Ed Quinn was there and participated by laying a wreath in the water. After the memorial service, maps and memorabilia related to the wreck were on display at the Bayonne Public Library. Another memorial service was held at 6:30pm in the Library Courtyard and presentations followed about the wreck and rescue. Ed Quinn spoke about his recollections and displayed a memorabilia exhibit for those attending the remembrance.
